CCP Microfiber Guide

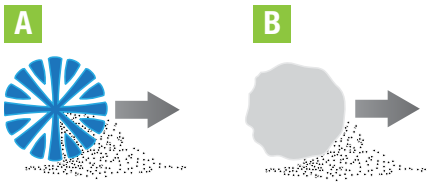
Microfiber For Cleaning

One strand of MicroWorks® Microfiber is several hundred times smaller than a strand of cotton. The wedge-shaped, lint free, hypoallergenic microfibers lift and trap dust, grime, and moisture without harming/ scratching delicate surfaces.

To be effective as a cleaning product, it has to be split microfiber. If it is not split during manufacturing, it isn't much more than a very soft cloth. One way to determine if the microfiber is split is to run the palm of your hand over it. If it grabs the imperfections on your skin then it is split. Open spaces in the fibers are created during the splitting process, which makes microfiber an effective cleaning tool. Microfiber provides a higher level of surface area, ideal for more efficient cleaning.

Microfiber fibers are positively charged. Dirt and dust are negatively charged so they are attracted to microfiber like a magnet. The microfiber holds on to the dust and dirt until it is released in the laundering process or when it is rinsed out.

If you were to look at a cross section of split microfiber, it would look like an asterisk. The split fiber working in conjunction with the space between them is what does the cleaning.



Cross sections:
Image (A) is microfiber thread, image (B) is cotton thread; microfiber leaves little or no residue, unlike cotton
